Read the Story:

In a small village, there was a river that often flooded, causing trouble for the villagers. One day, a young girl saw an old man planting a tree by the riverbank.

She approached him and asked, "Why are you planting a tree here, old man? It will not stop the flood." The old man replied, "This tree might not stop the flood today, but in years to come, its roots will help hold the soil, and its presence will make a difference."

The girl pondered this and then asked, "But what if it doesn’t work?" The old man smiled and said, "Even if this tree alone cannot stop the flood, it will contribute to a better future. Every small effort adds up. We must do our part, even if the results are not immediate."
