21 DAYS CHALLENGE

Focus Area

Learn to use questions at key points in your speech to engage and involve your audience, creating a powerful hook and keeping their attention throughout.

Step-by-Step Guide:

Using Questions as a Hook

Engagement: Involves your audience, making them feel part of the narrative.

Curiosity: Ignites interest, keeping them eager for more.

Reflection: Prompts them to connect their experiences with your story.

Example: Using Questions in a Story
Let’s use the "serial killer of dreams" story from the previous challenge. This time, we’ll replace the shocking statement with questions.

Start with a Question:
"Have you ever felt like you were slowly killing your own dreams, piece by piece?"
This draws your audience in by making them reflect on their own lives.

Insert Another Question in the Middle:
"What would you do if your biggest dreams were slipping away because of the expectations of others?"
This keeps the audience engaged, prompting them to think further about the situation.

Keep the Audience Involved:
By asking these questions, you make the audience reflect on their own experiences and feel more connected to your story.

Challenge Activity:
Your task is to create a short story using questions as your hook. Follow these steps:

Start with a Question: Ask a thought-provoking question that connects to your story.

Use Questions Throughout: Insert another question in the middle to keep your audience engaged and thinking.

Keep the Audience Involved: Let your questions invite your audience to reflect on their experiences as you guide them through your story.

Practice: Ensure your questions blend naturally into your story.

Record Your Speech: Use questions at key moments and observe how they enhance audience engagement.

Conclusion:

Using questions as a hook makes your audience think and keeps them involved in your story. Practice starting your story with a powerful question and see how it transforms your storytelling.

Good luck, and happy storytelling!
